

Starland

April 1, 1999

Winter of '99 has now finally moved on, but remains fresh in our memories. Frozen lakes made construction of our residential recreational projects a little more difficult, but the work continued regardless. With seven projects continuing through the winter months, three on islands on frozen lakes, travel sometimes became a challenge whether by road, ice, water or air.

“three..... on islands on frozen lakes”

“foundations below the ice for a Muskoka Boathouse”

But to prepare for a number more starting in Spring, and to meet schedules for use in the approaching summer season, work had to continue. Island work included one totally new collection of buildings and a cottage addition on Georgian Bay, and steel foundations below the ice for a Muskoka boathouse.

“wild and exciting ice boat rides”

Fruits of our winter labour will be featured in issues of Starland in the near future. Thanks to David Berman, Harold Blower, everyone at Storburn Construction and Gord Darlington for their efforts on behalf of our clients this past winter, and particularly to Gord for the wild and exciting ice boat rides!
